

THE BROWER SYMPOSIUM

BUILDING GREEN :: WHO LEARNED WHAT FROM WHOM?

A conversation celebrating the opening of Berkeley's David Brower Center:

What does 'green building' mean to the profession of architecture and architectural education?

Are collaboration and multi-disciplinarity teachable? What is the architect's role in a big, green collaboration?

What can we say about greenness, urbanism, contextuality and the legacy of modern architecture?

Part I: The Story of The David Brower Center: Conception, Design, Performance

PETER BUCKLEY, Chair: The David Brower Center
DANIEL SOLOMON & MALCOLM HARRIS, Architects
JOHN CLAWSON, Financial Strategies
PETER RUMSEY, Environmental Systems
GEORGE LOISOS, Daylighting Systems
DAVID MAR, Structural Systems
LARRY STRAIN, Materiality, & LEED

Part II: Lessons From the David Brower Center: Teaching Green

SUSAN UBBELOHDE, UC Berkeley, Architecture
HARRISON FRAKER, UC Berkeley, Architecture
STANLEY SAITOWITZ, UC Berkeley, Architecture
SAM DAVIS, UC Berkeley, Architecture
CHRIS BENTON, UC Berkeley, Architecture
DANIEL SOLOMON, UC Berkeley Emeritus

architecture
greenness
contextualism

THURSDAY | APR 23 | 630pm

THE DAVID BROWER CENTER
OXFORD PLAZA, 2150 ALLSTON WAY, BERKELEY

RECEPTION TO FOLLOW DISCUSSION | 8PM